Here is an experiment which illustrates the evolution of your vision with regard to color. Take a hope eard in your right hand and a yellow one in your left and try to look at them at the same time with different eyes You will see a dirty white or a competition between the two colors. You will see neither blue nor yellow definitely. Red and green cards in place of blue and yellow produce a yellowish color or a similar composition.

A well known professor now suggests that If a little orange were introduced into red lights and a little blue into the green. alightly color-blind people would be able to distinguish between S them.

How Changes in Season

Cause Color Variation The tendency of some unimals to change color with the sensons. Uke the foliage of trees, is explained by Dr. R. R. Hell-tis of the University of thegon in the American Journal of Manumalogy.

Doctor Hopsils found that the fur of certain western mice became progressively darker with the advance of cold weather. He also ascertained that the planent responsible for fur estor is contained in cells at the tips of the toirs, where it is most nice ted is the Helt. Thus it is the el per in the nature and unantity of that whi she advancing season that ent on the climber.

THERE was always something cheerful about the atmosphere of O'Grady's store that stood on one of the corners where the state highway crossed the old Main street of the village called North Hill.

There were always plenty of people walting for the bus, young men who bought eigarettes as an excuse to hang around an hour or more, older men occasionally talking polities, girls sitting at the tables giggling over their ice cream. If you had been a resident business was introduced by James of North Hill and had a son you would have taken it for granted probthe Nutional Dairy council. PRIZED GRAY HAIRS WENT INTO DISCARD

A young advertising man has long been handleapped by the fact that, while young, he is not nearly so young. as he looks. His youthfulness of appearance has often caused persons in nuthority—such as traffic policemen to treat him with a degree of condescension rather painfully noticeable. His office boy, whose appearance is one of slightly premature maturity, is everywhere treated by subway guards. box office employees and garage attendants with infinitely more respect than he ever can achieve,

This persistent youthfulness has worried him, mildly, for ten years or more. It was, therefore, with something near real pleasure that he welcomed the first gray hairs. He envisioned himself as, at long length, attaining the dignity of appearance he had come to covet—partly because so many people absent-mindedly aildressed him as "boy." The gray came along nicely. It spread along the sides of his head. He approached maturity. Then his wife, embarking on one of her periodical campaigns to smarten lilm up, insisted that he keep his halr cut shorter. He explained the need to the barber.

In Howard's case, to his bitter realization, the fundamental principle, love for his work, was lacking. It was difficult to cross his family in its unanimous desire for his electing dentistry. His grandfather and father were about to retire, his two brothers had removed to remote western cities there to develop practices and his sister, about to marry, was torn between continuing her profession or following. the wish of her husband-to-be, that she

It was therefore expected of Howard that he would go into dentistry, and keep alive, so to speak, the Masters' tradition in the Middle West city, where for generations there had been a Doctor Masters, D.D.S.

The whole manher of delegates was 55, and there was searcely a man among them who had not been distinguished in the state or in the field, who had not been a governor, a member of congress, or a commander to the army. A few had served in the Stamp Act congress in 1765, others had set their names to the immortal Declaration in 1774, and one had framed the plan of union at Allmar in 1754. Intelligence of Termiter

Termites, a species of white ant are among the world's most destructive insects, Social in disposition. they live in colonies, eating wood and behaving in a way that excites endless surprises. Some of their practires are too unpleasant to be deserbed. On the other hand, they are industrious, and highly infelligent, observing complex social rules. At the hend of each community are a royal pair. The queen ranks as one of the most remarkable insects in the world She is carefully guarded by the wasters and protected by the seldlers, The government is democratic, not more archial. The queen's actions are regulated by the workers. The whole community is under their control.

Underground Dwellers

Tunisla has perhaps the strangest cave dwellers in the world. They are found south of Gabes, on the fringe of the desert. In their efforts to escape the heat they have dug dwellings in the sand. The traveler crossing the plain of Matual comes neross what appear to be wells. Looking down, he discovers in the half light a small courtyard, and tunneled from the hot tom of the well-like cavity are com plete dwellings. Access is through a slowly descending tunnel. Down below the surface lives the whole famfly, and there are stables for their animals.

Lejeune Got "Thriller"

After War Was Over When General Lejeune was asked to relate his most thrilling war experience he smiled and said:

"It did not come in the war, but after it, when the troops of occupation were passing through Belgium. We were given a wonderful reception and in one city I was on the platforme and had to make a speech. When I had finished our chaplain arose and to my amazement and horror announced that Mile. Clementine, the formous dancer who was traveling with me, would entertain with someof her inimitable dances.

"And how she danced, while I sat there in horror, knowing that my reputation was ruined beyond repair.

"Imagine, then, my relief when, at the end of the dance, Alle Clementine removed a very pretentious wig and I recognized the close-cropped black head and smiling countenanceof my very unsenline soldier-cook and the chaplain explained the joke to the andlence,

"Ah." I exclaimed jumping to my feet, "If he only could cook as well us he dences wer would almost be a pleasure."

seeing Aurore LeBlond, that summer behind him, but the thought of Mc-Lauren monopolizing her for days weeks, possibly—nroused in him a deep resentment over the duty which had sent him south to Lake Expanse He found himself wondering if this McLauren were a single man-then laughed at a jealousy based on a few hours with a girl whom, in all likelihood, he would never see again. The peterboro approached the post,

At the factor's quarters a woman watched Jim's approach. He waved his hat and she lifted a hand in reply. As he reached her the fair skin of the girl's face was touched with color, her blue eyes, beneath the thatch of gold knotted at the back, alight with pleasure. "Well, Jim, how are you?" said

Jim choked down his anger as the old man went on: "Now they'll not be thinking of a change this year, but---"

"But what?" broke in the exasperated factor of Sunset House, "If that's meant to be a threat, Mr. Christie, make it specific! I've worked hard to make a go of it, but you know and I know that we've got the cleverest fur man in the bush as a competitor, and if you and headquarters think some one else would do better, say so now. Send another man and see what he'll show!"

"Tut! tut! Not so fust! I sent yeh up there and I ain't ordered yeh out-

The gray eyes of the younger man guttered. "What you mean," he said, staring through half-shut eyes into the impassive face of Andrew Christie circled by its stubby beard, "is that you're giving me one more chance—a year, perhaps." "Aye, that would be fair."

Jim smiled sourly, "Knowing the odds against us, you, nevertheless, think we ought to be on our feet by another year?" Christie nodded,

"Well," said Jim, rising, and expelling a deep breath, "unfair as it is. I'll take you. If I don't double the trade next year I'll quit." The following morning as he walked on the shore of the lake with Mary Christic he told her of the year of grace given him by her father. "Oh, Jim," she protested, "he doesn't mean that, They're worrying him at Winnipeg and he's taking it out on everybody. He was the same way with McCoy, from Jackfish, last week." "Well," Jim turned, to surprise the veiled look in her eyes-a look now close to pain. "it's hard to work three years as we have worked and in the end get kicked for our pains."

"I appreciate what you've done up there, Jim." She gazed at him through eyes unabashed, empty of all subterfuge, as she said slowly: "Doesn't it mean anything to you to know that I believe in you?" He saw the girl's heart in her stead-

That afternoon as the cance left the post bound back to Sunset House and Jim waved his hat at the lone figure standing in the clearing he carried with him the memory of the tense face of Mary Christie. He saw her again, her heart in her eyes, offering her love. Her appeal had been powerful-the frank revelation by this Mary Christic leaned toward the proud girl who had held much of his even if the black-inshed eyes of Aurore LeBlond had never flashed their challenge, it could not have been otherwise. Andrew Christle had, the night before, cracked the whip of his nuthority over Jim's head-given him n "I don't think much of it," said year of grace. In all honor he could Mary, drily, "but you're not telling not then have sought sanctuary behind the skirts of his chief's daughter. But the picture of the girl in the distant clearing algorithm Godspeed to the rapidly disappearing cance, left

Two days later, with Smoke running the shore. Jim and Omar were poling the peterboro up a wild reach of the swift Woman river. Jim's thoughts niternated between the coming year which would decide his future with the company, and the two women, far apart as the poles in nature and temperament, who had come into his life. As for Aurore Lelllond, she would soon be but a memory. In a month she was going "out"-back to Winnings. There was no chance of even seeing her again, as he was to start with timar and Esau at once for the Pipe stone country. The cance was entering a stretch of "strong water" demanding the utmost efforts of the crew to force her upstream when, suldenly, a rifle exploded in the willows of the near shore and a bullet splintered the spruce pole in Omar's hands. Of balance, the bowman langed into the river, but twisted as he fell and caught and hung to the gunwale of the boat white Jim threw his weight against the roll of the awinging craft.

"Lie down! Let her dreef?" called the half-breed as a ride again cracked In the willows and a splinter from the that of the year before. It was no runnale flicked Alm's desperate fare with blood.

Flattening out in the cance, he groped for his gun lying amidships as the drag of the man in the water headed the bow down river. Again a rifle exploded and a bullet passed through the wooden wall of the craft close to Jim's head. What could it mean? Who would ambush them here on the Woman river? As the boat drifted out of easy range of the willows. Ilm reached and cocked his gan, rose boldly to his knees and rapidly emptled the magaring at the telitale wise of amoka against the green of the scrab. Then over the bow rose a dripping face warped with rage as the thick arms of Omar lifted his body from the water. With a lungo the half-breed was in the rolling cance and his rifle firing at the fast receding shore.

Shortly a bend maked the willows from the eight of the dancing craft and the men awing the cance in to the beach.

"Well, what's this mean?" demanded

"l'aradees, for succi" snapped the bowman as they landed. "Come on, we lant for demi" And Omar plunged ahead into the bush.

Jim Reached and Cocked His Gun Rose Boldly to His Knees and Rapidly Emptied the Magazine at the Tell-Tale, Wisp of Smoke Against the Green Scrub.

They had traveled less than a hundred yards when a familiar yelp, from somewhere upstream, sounded above the fret of the river.

"Smoke! He'll find their trail!" muttered Jim. Then fear for the safety of the dog he loved led him to push rapidly on up the river shore while Omar cut back inland behind the scene of the ambush.

Suddenly, deep in the forest, a rifle was fired and Jim's heart sank, as he heard the husky's yelp. "He's slut Smoke!"

Furious with the thought of his gallant dog gasping out his life from a bullet wound, Jim plunged ahead in the direction of the rille shot. Shortly he saw a dark patch through the spruce and threw his rifle to his shoulder. As he libed his sights, the dark face of Owar appeared, head tilted as if listening. Jim reached his friend's side. "Did you fire that shot? Where's Smoke?" he demanded. "I thought he was

"I shoot at dat feller! Smoke's ster him now in dose cedar. It ees o l'ick you see noding." "You saw him?"

"Ah-buh l" Separating, the two men started drelling the dense cedar growth. Ilm had not traveled a hundred yards when he heard Smoke's roar, followed by a shot, then the sounds of a struggle. Plunging through the thick undergrowth, mad with anxiety for the safety of his dog, he saw a running' figure turn and swing with clubbed ride at the black-and-white bulk of the pursuing Smoke. With a muffled roar the hurt dog again lunged at the Indian; again the clubbed rifle crashed as the husky leaped. Knocked back to his haunches, with a shake of the hend the great dog closed with the Indian, who was desperately trying to lond as he ran. The tusks of Smoke sampled as his one hundred and forty pounds bore his quarry to the carth.

Throwing himself on the enraged dog, Jim balked the lunge which would have torn the throat of the help less man on the ground, then dragged the battle-mad Smoke from his prey.

"Throw that kalle away or I'll let him have you!" Aim commanded, holding the straining husky as the Olibwa. rolling away from the snapping fangs, reached for the sheath on his sash. "Now lie where you are! If that shot hit him. I'll put him on you, anyway." But there was no sign of blood on Smoke's trembling body. Then Omar, drawn by the shot, reached them. "Alt-halt! So Paradees sen' you? Wal, I t'ink we camp here tonight wile you tell wat you know bout Supper over, Omar Legan the inquisition of the sullen Ojihwa who had remained dumb to all attempts to make him talk. Lighting his pipe, the half-breed freshened the fire, then squatted beside the prisoner, whose feet were pinloned with raw-hide, and sald quietty in Olibwa: "You have woman and children?" The mink-like eyes of the Indian shot a furlive glance at the lined visage of the man who squinted into the fire. Jim watched with curiosity the drama the wily Omar was staging, Then he mumbled a faint, "Enhand!

"If you wish to see the Lake of the Sand Reaches again, you speak with n single tongue," went on the Inquisitor in Olibwa, as if talking to himself, his over still fixed on the fire. "You lie to me, now!" (mar suddealy stormed, turning a face distorted with passion on his man, as his fron Angers gripped the Indian's throat, "and I'll feed your heart to the rayens!"

The cowed prisoner flinched from the steel point of Cimar's knife which pricked his chest, "You speak with a split tongue and the wolven will pick your bones!" Omar's left hand closed on the Indlam's throat till the terror-haunted eyes of the gasping man protruded from his gray face. Then the halfbreed abruptly released him, replaced his skinning knife in its sheath, and resumed his silent contemplation of the fire. Fascinated by the deams, Jim watched the two across the fire from helilad a screen of toliacco smoke. "You lak' to see do sun rise once more?" The suff lips of Omar scarcely moved as he rasped out the cuostion in English. But the prisoner was To be continued.

'orgotten Heroes By Elmo Scott

The Hero of Campbell's Island NOT all of the heroes of the War of 1812 made their bid for fame on the battlellelds of the East or lo the naval fighting which forms such a brilliant page in the history of that conflict. Our in what was then "the West" there were heroes, too. One of them was Capt, Stephen Rector.

In 1814 Captains Rector and Riggs with 66 Illinois Rangers were ordered to accompany Lieutenant Campbell with a force of 42 regulars in three keel boats up the Mississippi to reinforce the garrison at Prairie du Chien in Wisconsin. Going through the dank gerous rapids near Rock Island, Camp bell's barge was driven ashore on the small island which now bears his name. Here he prepared to spend the night but no sooner had he pitched his camp than he was attacked by a war party of Sac Indians.

Rector and Riggs, hearing the firing, tried to return to his aid but in the storm-tossed river Riggs' boat became unmanageable and was stranded in the rapids. Rector managed to bring his boat near enough to Campbell's men, hiding in the trees which fringed the edge of the island, to fire upon the savages at long range. Suddenly Rector was horrified to see Campbell's barge burst into flames. Caught between the blazing boat and Black Hawk's whooping braves, the regulars faced annihilation.

Rector made his decision instantly. Ordering the anchor to be raised and the barge to be lightened by easting overboard nearly all of his provisions. he gulded his boat down the raging stream into the teeth of the Indian fire. Forcing it to the windward of the burning boat, his boatmen leaped into the water and held their craft close to Campbell's barge. Indian but lets were crashing into the timbers or both boats but Rector coolly went about the work of directing the rescue of Campbell's men. While some of the Rangers opened fire on the Indians, the others transferred the wounded and dying from the burning barge to their own.

Finally the last wounded man had been transferred. Then Rector cast off and running a gantlet of renewed Indian fire, his boat swent down the river with its precious cargo of wounded men safely out of the range of the . (G. 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

It was just an ordinary ash whose twigs and branches were endowed with curative powers. It was believed that when a shrew-mouse crept over a horse or cow, the animal was threatened with the loss of the use of its limbs. The beast could be restored to its normal state only by applying the twigs of the shrow-ash to the affected part.

But in order that the shrew-ash possess those curative powers, it had to be prepared in a certain way. Into the trunk of the tree a deep hole was bored with an auger, a shrew-mouse was thrust in allye, and plugged in, no doubt, with certain quaint incantations.—Detroit News.

to Mind His P's and Q's My grandmother frequently used the expression "Now, mind your p's and d's." when cautioning her grandchildren about getting into mischlef and nearly always when they left the house to go for a visit. I find myself using the expression, but was "stumped" when my daughter asked me what it meant and where it came from. Can you give me some help? asks a reader of the Indianapolis News, and that journal answers: The expression is commonly used to mean be careful." According to some nuthorities, it originated among printers when all type was set by hand. Type bearing the p's and q's was easily confused by apprentices, and journeymen printers urged them to be careful about distributing the letters to their proper place in the case. This explanation commands the weight of nutbority, but there is a contention time the expression came from Engon the back of the door under general headings, pints and ts. Yet the record of American financial leadership and of respensible government, officials was resrettably one of too much silence.

Sounded Few Warnings Few warnings were issued, and few attention to the danger that threatened. Credit for the expansion of productive facilities to meet temporary demands was granted to business without adequate consideration of the consequences. Credit without stint was furnished to consumers to buy consumable goods, thereby further increasing false purchasing power and multiplying debt. No one called a halt.

Joe's Faith

By CORONA REMINGTON Kannadanannannannannannanak

SIIE was only a little maid in a big botel and he the chef, but he had generations of chefs behind him and hers was a family of the highest type of mulds. One nunt had been in the Delpont family for twenty-five years, and at one time her first cousin had been employed in the White House. When Joe Porter and Arst mentioned marriage to Cornella Allen she had hesitated although she did love him. "Well, I'll never marry anybody else," he vowed. "You're as pretty as a little picture and your folks are all honest and fine people, and I love you and I believe you love me, too. Isn't that reason enough why we should get maryled?" Corneha said nothing for a moment. she merely permitted him to keep his arm around her, which was a sort of consent, he considered, since she never had done this before. She did love him, she knew she did. "But, Joe, I wanted to go up in my work—get to be indies'_maid to somebody be ar arriety," she protested, and her dark eyes so close to his looked troubled, almost tragle, happier. She was in the midst of doing her work on the Afth floor one day when she received a summons to go to the office of Mr. Williams, the manager, at once. Puzzled, she lairried down and found her employer talking to a struger whom she supposed to be a guest. He seemed disturbed about something and would scarcely let Mr. Williams speak, but with a gesture of the hand the manager silenced him and addressed the maid bluself.

"Cornella, did you clean up 516 this morning," he asked. "Yes," unswered the girl, her face suddenly paling. "Why? What's the mention to your grocer, your butcher or any of the tradesmen who serve you, that you read the Citizen? If they knew their message would reach you through this paper they would gladly advertise their special bargains. That would help you and bring business to them. It would mean that often instead of sending away for things you would discover these articles to be as cheap right here in Bethel. Think of the time you'd save and—the convenience.

So next time you call on your local tradesman tell him you get the Citizen every week and that it would be a great convenience if you could learn of his bargains while reading at home in your favorite chair rather than "shopping around" in all degrees of weather.

And the Citizen will say "Thank You" with a better and the citizen will say "Thank You" with a better and bigger value in news and service. Don't knock—Boost. It pays.
